Join a rapidly growing organization. Serve your community. Dream big.

Connecting Point is a public health and human services organization that produces a wide range of services throughout Northern California. Currently, we are in a tremendous growth phase with lots of exciting products and services being offered. As we begin to materialize the development and gain momentum with our Community Data Exchange, we need a Communications Manager to help us grow!

With the values of creativity, imagination, and innovation, Connecting Point is seeking a Communications Manager. A successful applicant will have core competencies in business development and be able to demonstrate establishing strategic relationships with executive level partners, brand management, and grant writing. The Communications Manager will manage and direct the communications team while working closely with the Connecting Point's executive leadership.
